HOG-OTRY CONTEST.

The Printed Report is Received From Washington.

Mr. John L. Lee, counsel for Major Peter J. O'Leary, received from Washington yesterday the printed report in the contested election case of Hoge vs. O'Leary. It is compiled in pamphlet form and is not very voluminous.

The first article in the pamphlet is the notice of contest served on Major O'Leary by Colonel Hoge. It is a lengthy notice and covers the district pretty thoroughly. In fact, it is about the only thorough thing Hoge has done in connection with the contest. It alleges frauds of every description, and claims for Mr. Hoge a majority, which he never would have gotten under the circumstances.

The printed report having been furnished to both contestant and contestee thirty days is given Hoge in which to file his brief or argument. After the lapse of the thirty days a similar length of time will be given Major O'Leary in which to reply. The only thing then remaining is to bring the matter up before the Congressional committee and there the contest finds its end.—Lynchburg News.

Chamberlain's Eye and Skin Ointment is a certain cure for Chronic Sore Eyes, Granulated Eye Lids, Sore Nipples, Piles, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum and Scald Head. 25 cents per box. For sale by druggists.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. PHOEBE THOMAS, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida street, San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption; tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Christian & Barbee's drug store. Regular size 50 cents and $1.

R. M. Sutton & Co.

CAPT. D. C. BOOTH, agent of R. M. Sutton & Co., of Baltimore, wholesale dealers in dry goods and notions, whose sample rooms are in the Hotel Lee, (corner Salem avenue and Commerce street) has just received and opened up the largest and most complete line of dry goods and notion samples ever exhibited in this city. Captain Booth will be pleased to see the merchants of the city and surrounding country at his sample rooms.

I have used it for years, know it to be a reliable remedy, and recommend it to every one." For sale by Chas. Lyle Drug Co.

If you want to post yourself on the money question read "Coin's Financial School." Price, 25 cents. For sale by Thompson & Meadows.

ARP GETS NEW LIGHT.

He Has Been Reading Coin and Learned Much.

I have just finished reading Coin's last book, "Up to Date." If somebody doesn't answer it and prove it a lie it will shake this country from center to circumference. The bankers and speculators and money kings will be overthrown and the danger is that the masses will go too far in revenging their wrongs and crush all alike. When he shows up the inequalities of taxation and how the rich escape, it makes the blood boil with indignation.

Aside from the silver question, he gives a certificate of David Gore, the auditor of public accounts for the State of Illinois, which shows that all that the bankers and brokers of Chicago had assessed for taxation was only $44,000 of money, while farmers of that county were assessed $84,000 for agricultural tools and implements. Think of it! The farmers' tools are assessed nearly twice as much as all the money credits and securities of all the banks, bankers and brokers of that great city. And all the diamonds and jewelry in Chicago were assessed at $17,750, when it is known that single families live there who own diamonds and jewelry ten times that sum in value. The money of these banks amounts to hundreds of millions, but through the manipulation of municipal politics the rich control the assessors and escape taxation. Can this be true? If it is false, why doesn't Eli Perkins say so? I see that he has taken the field against Coin, but I can't tell exactly from his last piece whether he is lying or joking.

He closes it by saying that after he had shown Coin his errors and fallacies Coin gave it up and the tears rolled down his cheeks and he dismissed his school and declared he wasn't going to teach any more. I like Eli. I like any lie that is funny and harmless. I used to like to read Baron Munchausen, and I like to read Eli now. I confess that it strains my credulity to believe what Coin writes about the Chicago bankers' tax, but there is the certificate of the State auditor. Surely there is some explanation of all this. We know what Solomon and Paul and the Savior said about rich men, but I never believed that our rich men were that bad.

Now, the Chicago gold-bugs have called a meeting to see if they can't stop all this rumormongering silver, but they might as well try to stop a tornado. I wasn't taking much stock in those financial affairs, for I had read so much on both sides that it made my head swim, and so when a friend sent me Coin's first book I took it up with prejudice against it, for I supposed that Mr. Harvey was a Chicago Yankee and was paid by the Inter Ocean to write on that side, and so I fortified myself against being seduced by his book.

I read it rather hurriedly, watching for traps and triggers, but I didn't find them, and I found so much information that was new to me that I read it more carefully the second time, and I came to the conclusion that Coin was a very smart man, or I was a very great fool—more than the first, and if these two little books had better get somebody else beside Eli to expose them—Eli's forte is fun, not flattery.—"BILL ARP" in Atlanta Constitution.

AN ENGLISH PUBLIC HOUSE.

Its Arrangement and Its Patrons and How It is Conducted.

Let us choose a typical house and go inside. Call it the Blue Bear and say the hour is 9 p. m. The house has a long frontage toward the main road and extends round the corner into a by-street. It is entered by several doors, and each opens into a separate compartment of the bar-room, which but for the dividing partitions would be an extensive saloon fully 70 feet in length. This arrangement in compartments is peculiar to the British urban public house and is designed partly for the sake of greater privacy, partly to diminish the chances of disorder and to assist the landlord in quelling it when it arises. The second is the chief object in places frequented by the lower classes, while privacy, gentility, or is understood to gratify customers of superior station. The Blue Bear entertains both, having two or three compartments at one end rather more comfortable than the rest, and further protected from the public gaze by a glass screen, such as is now almost universal in the west end, running along the counter, but raised sufficiently above it to allow glasses to be passed underneath. This screening off of customers may perhaps be taken for a sign of grace indicating recognition of the growth of public opinion against bar loading, and especially in women, who seem to desire privacy the most.

The rest of the Blue Bear bar is quite open, and the sons of toil stand at it without fear and without reproach. Some bare wooden benches adorn most of the compartments, but they are little used. The floor is sawdusted, filthy with spilled liquor and expectoration, the counter slopy with beer marks, which are periodically wiped down by a barmaid wielding a wet cloth. On the other side all is bright, clean, spick and span. The attendants, who include the "governess," the "missus" and three or four girls, are tidy, quiet and active.

This is one of the roughest houses in a very rough neighborhood, but no fault can be found with the management. At the present moment the customers are equally quiet. They number about 50 and are scattered along the bar in the different compartments, some sitting down, more standing up, smoking and talking quietly. Itinerant vendors of matches and penny songs come and go. A tall young fellow, perfectly sober, tries very hard to engage the barmaids in conversation, but without much success.—National Review.
